moments of taylor

How often do you take a step back to consider who or what is being magnified through your life?

With the start of every semester, we involve ourselves immediately in wing life, intramurals, and schoolwork, and quickly become consumed by our commitments. This is the life of a Taylor student, after all.

And over the course of four years at Taylor University, a college student can choose to magnify many things. This book is a small attempt at magnifying those moments of tradition, competition, involvement, and education that we experience on this campus. And there is much to see.

Amidst these full and busy days, we must consider what is being magnified through the ways we choose to spend our time. Our commitments to ministry, relationships, and schoolwork are good, but how long are we able to thrive on over-committed schedules before our focus becomes blurry and our motivation weakens?

In addition to magnifying the moments of Taylor, this book also contains hopes of displaying the importance and necessity of magnifying the Lord, not separate from, but within all that we do.

What does your life magnify?

welcome weekend

getting acquainted

Being the first college experience for freshmen, Welcome Weekend starts things off with a bang. With help from leaders around campus, it is a three day taste of the many unique memories the Taylor community will soon provide. It begins with new faces piling out of mini vans to be greeted by their O-group leaders' helping hands. From grass games to the high ropes course, Welcome Weekend is an experience that even upperclassmen try and sneak back for. "Ever since that first hoe down, I knew I needed to get back to campus early every year," says O-group leader Angela Van Gorp.

After picnicking on the lawn and trying to coordinate the steps to a line dance, it is understandable why the hoe-down becomes a highlight for all weekend participants. Although Welcome Weekend is fuel for laughter, entertainment, and primarily an excuse to dance at Taylor, it also provides the foundation for new relationships that will grow on campus in the years to come. Upperclassmen get a chance to introduce incoming students to their new settings, while freshmen get many opportunities to meet their new spouses...and friends.

—Jenny Stringer '11

"I'd never heard of a hoedown before Welcome Weekend, but it was so much fun! Now I can go back home to Cali and teach my friends the dosie doe. Thanks TU!"

—Paige Stoecklein '12

The ropes course really helped me see the value of encouragement and how through building one another up, we are able to accomplish feats we never knew possible.

—Gabbi Gehringer '12

"The magic of Welcome Weekend will live on in my heart forever."

community plunge

lending a helping hand

Community Plunge is a service event that gives Taylor students an opportunity to reach out to the surrounding communities of Grant County. Each year, Community Outreach of Taylor World Outreach, organizes this event to encourage students to become involved in public service. It is a fun way for Taylor students to serve those in need. A variety of projects allow everyone to be involved. This year, projects included washing fire trucks, painting, picking up trash, yard work, working at the Matthews covered bridge festival, and more. The Plunge has been around for years and continues to bring excitement on Taylor's campus each year.

tu tube: broadcast thyself

After brainstorming and choreographing (some as early as the summer before), groups around campus were signing up to try out for Airband 2008. The Inter Class Council spent two long evenings judging 17 groups based on their sets, instruments, costumes, choreography, and audience appeal. We stayed up into the early morning hours finalizing the 11 groups that would perform for Airband.

The night before Airband, ICC decked the Rediger Chapel Auditorium in our theme, TUTube, which matched our laptop tickets and commercials. Students and faculty lined up for two showings and were greeted with a "Broadcast of Thyself." Andrew Neel and Laura Bobbett emceed the event, and faculty sat on a panel of judges to determine the top three performances. Daft Punk, a techno light show, placed third. In second place was Gerig with a moving performance of "Deliver Us" from the Prince of Egypt, and "Step in Time" from Mary Poppins performed by Second East Wengatz won first place and performed two encores.

homecoming

anticipated reconnections

Homecoming. Although this word usually implies someone's absence, the encouraging part is that it often means the return of someone who once was away. More than a chance to reconnect, Homecoming brings new energy and a refreshed state of mind. This year's Homecoming brought the anticipated return of an estimated 1,100 former alumni, students, and friends. This year's theme, "The Colors of Taylor," while being reminiscent of the beautiful fall season, served as a reminder to celebrate the work God has called each of us to do around the world. The weekend opened with the chapel address of Taylor alum Kyle Martin, who challenged Taylor students and alumni to embrace our renewal in Christ. Some major components of the weekend involved the New Alumni Program, the 100-year celebration of Taylor Theatre, and Hall of Fame inductions. The rest of the weekend offered much to be involved in, including the annual 5k walk/run, a number of athletic events, class reunions, musical events, and alumni awards brought the community together for the Homecoming tradition. It is a hope that each Homecoming experienced by students will be filled with memories of the connections that were previously made. May Taylor always remain in our minds as a place we not only call "home" for a few years but as a place where we are always welcome to return.

parents' weekend | grandparents' day

Parents' and Family Weekend was held September 19–21. Nearly 450 families came from as far away as California, Texas, and Florida, and even Qatar and Albania. They enjoyed special events that included a Friday night block party, Saturday's concert featuring award-winning Christian performing artist Fernando Ortega, volleyball and football games, music, food, fun, and fellowship.

Grandparents' Day fell on the same weekend as Heritage Weekend this year and offered events like the 55th annual Taylathon Bike Race, a Jazz Ensemble and Taylor Ringers concert, a distinguished faculty lecture presented by Dr. Daniel King, and dedications of Campbell Hall and Brad's Bridge (which honors Brad Larson who passed away in the April 26, 2006 van accident).

Spiritual Renewal

World Opportunities Week 2008, "Before the Throne," was a powerful week in which God spoke through over 40 missionaries present on campus, as well as the chapel messages given by Krish Kandiah. "Before the Throne" came from Revelation 7:9-10, "After this I looked, and there before me was a great multitude that no one could count, from every nation, tribe, people and language, standing before the throne and in front of the lamb." This passage left us with three clear implications: First, people from everywhere will be in front of the Lamb. Second, missions is about worship to the Lamb. Finally, all of our strength in missions comes from God. Salvation belongs to our God. Throughout the week, Kandiah encouraged students to be active both at home and abroad. He spoke on the three themes of "Before the Throne" and mobilized students to be involved now through his daily blog posts.

—Brittany Hughes '09

Spiritual Renewal Week provides special opportunities for the Taylor community to hear from God's Word in order to begin each semester with a greater commitment to Christ. This year's series featured the memorable preaching of Dr. Charles Ware, president of Crossroads Bible College in Indianapolis, Ind. His sermon series, taken from Ephesians 4:1-6, was entitled "Walking Worthy of the Call" and challenged students to be united to one another in Christ and together devoted to his gospel truth. Through prayer, parable, and proclamation, Dr. Ware encouraged individuals to "bring revival to the church and awakening to the land" – all for the sake of Christ.

my generation night

beyond the grind

MGN 2008 had the highest number of auditions ever—48. Each of the acts in the show were fantastic and clearly demonstrated the talent found on campus. There was a wide range of music performed from Idiotique to Coldplay to Regina Spektor. When it came to picking a theme for MGN, the Student Activities Council thought long and hard about what optimizes our generation. As a result, the coffee shop theme was born. What Taylor student has not frequented one of the three coffee shops in our area for a classic coffee date or homework session? Each of the skits played off of the typical stereotypes found within a coffee shop, and each one had a special Taylor spin on it. The night was entertaining and memorable from the first medley of songs all the way to the final moves of N'SYNC.

silent | habecker's night | holipalooza

This year's Silent Night and Holipalooza was a night to remember. All the students dressed for the occasions, from girls running around in flannel pajamas, to the Brotherhood having a real life portrayal of a manger scene with the Phubbbbbbs humbly portraying the role of "sweet baby Jesus." The stands erupted with applause when the 10th point was supposedly scored by the Taylor Trojans, yet we surprisingly found out the basket didn't count, and thus experienced two occasions of the loud cheering for the 10th point.

But the memorable night did not end there. After the basketball game, students rushed over to the DC to experience the thrill of Habecker's Holipalooza. With gingerbread house making, cookie decorating, karaoke playing, and swinging donuts hanging from the ceiling, all can agree the number of activities to pursue was endless. But what was the highlight of the night? Dr. and Mrs. Habecker's story time. Students cozily sprawled out on the floor with their Christmas cookies and hot chocolate as they were lulled into a dreamful state by the soothing voices of the Habeckers. Seriously, what other event could make a night more unforgettable?

Czech Republic—Sixteen students worked with Caleb's Heart ministry in Chotebor and Havlickuv Brod, teaching English and physical education in public schools, participating in youth ministry and outreach in two small churches, and serving orphans and gypsies.

Ecuador—Fourteen students continued Taylor's partnership with the Verbo Church in Cuenca, living with host families for two weeks, and serving in several ministries to address the needs of children and youth in crisis. They also performed work and ministry projects in Guabo and assisted with a child sponsorship project.

Ethiopia—Sixteen students taught at Project Mercy's school for 1,400 village students in the predominantly Muslim area of Yetebon. They also ministered to 70 orphans, provided leadership development programming for top students, and organized sports activities.

northern ireland, paraguay, southeast asia

Northern Ireland—Fifteen students did evangelistic outreach among youth and children through Project Evangelism at after-school programs, coffeehouse ministries, school assemblies, drop-in centers, and churches.

Paraguay—Sixteen students partnered with Letra Paraguay serving the Aché people for whom Taylor is funding a Bible translation. They provided discipleship and VBS programs for youth and children in three Aché communities while training Aché young people in ministry leadership. They also performed construction and plumbing work.

Southeast Asia—Sixteen students served among the Muslim “Sea Tribe people” through ethno-tourism. This involved three home stays on different islands with subsistence-fishing families that allowed for building relationships, cultural exchange, and sharing testimonies. They also taught English, engaged in community development projects, and participated in sports outreach.

they invade!

After sitting through 45 auditions for 12 spots, we knew we were going to produce a show unlike any other. Even the night's theme, They Invade, explored a concept that had never been done before at a major Taylor event. The sci-fi theme added a unique element to the night with neon spray paint, aliens, fog, and Taylor's very own rendition of some of the most famous sci-fi movie trailers.

Nostalgia Night was a top-notch, musically diverse show with songs from The Chiffons to Cat Stevens to The Eagles. Reed Spencer opened the night perfectly with The Who's "Won't Get Fooled Again."

After last year's Indiana Jones theme, S.A.C. knew we had to shoot big if we wanted to top it. I think we can say that due to awesome bands, great actors, and an amazing cabinet we were able to accomplish this. It's been amazing to see Nostalgia Night's attendance sky-rocket over the past three years, and we expect it to grow even more in future years.

Hard work and dedication paid off for film students at the Envision Film Festival. Student films, both from Taylor and the Los Angeles Film Studies Center, were shown in Mitchell Theater to reward the students for their accomplishments. The films submitted to the festival were viewed by a panel of judges, and of those submissions, eight were chosen to be in the running for the 12 award categories. Official sponsors of the festival, including Apple and Sony, donated prizes ranging from cash to cameras.

Seniors Abby Cerquitella and Jared Sorensen received awards for Best Picture and Best Short Film for The Grey Room, a film they directed and produced at the Los Angeles Film Studies Center during the fall semester. Sorensen also won Best Actor for his role in Brandon Hoff's film, "Hey, There's a Body in the Bathtub," which also won Best Comedy and the Audience Choice Award. The film tells the story of two buddies who panic when they discover a body in the bathtub. Students are already looking toward next year's festival.

"This year was a pivotal year in the festival's history," said senior and student producer for the festival Eliza Dhonau. "I cannot wait to see what great films future years produce."

spring break

chicago, daytona beach, dearborn, dominican republic, egypt & jordan

Chicago—The team worked with Sunshine Gospel Ministries, receiving practical experience in urban ministry and learning about God's heart for the poor.

Daytona Beach—Team members spent their days at a community park near the beach. Through playing volleyball and hanging out, they had the opportunity to build relationships and discuss faith with hundreds of people from all walks of life. The team reached out to homeless persons, people with mental handicaps, and other students on Spring Break.

Dearborn, MI—The team assisted a multicultural organization located in the largest Middle Eastern population in North America. They helped with ESL, sewing and computer classes, after-school tutoring, childcare, and crafts. They also took part in an immersion program, which involved attending a Mosque and meeting with the Islamic religious leader.

Dominican Republic—The group worked with Students International and participated in different ministries, including medical, special education, preschool, education, physical therapy, sports, agriculture, construction, and art. They also presented outreach programs, using music, puppetry, drama, and testimonies to reach people.

Egypt & Jordan—The team, comprised of the Taylor Sounds, visited in the homes of many Middle Eastern families, and performed concerts in a variety of locations.

1: The Taylor Sounds are filmed while singing at the national theater in downtown Amman, Jordan. The film will be sent to the queen of Jordan to show her the group's purpose for visiting Jordan.

2: Before leaving Chicago, the team visits the famous "Bean" in downtown Chicago.

3: While at a church in the Dominican Republic, Andy Davison gives a boy a piggyback ride to the basketball hoop, so he could make a "slam dunk."

El Salvador—The team worked with missionaries doing ministry that ranged from construction work on a new medical clinic, running ministry programs for children in schools, and working with the missionary's church in doing drama, puppet, and music presentations.

Galveston—Team members worked with Carpenters Hands on construction and work projects for hurricane clean up and relief. They also partnered with Good News Galveston to build several houses in a developing community.

Mexico—Joining with the Lion's Club, team members set up and ran clinics to redistribute eyeglasses to countless needy people, many of whom have lived their entire lives with impaired vision.

Nicaragua—The team worked with Partners Worldwide's Nehemiah Center for Transformational Development to train local businesspeople to use the practice of business as mission to grow their businesses, transform their families and communities, and increase economic development in Nicaragua.

Russia—Working with the Boaz Project, team members shared hope and love to orphans by hanging out with them, by teaching VBS lessons, and by building relationships with their interpreters.

Jenny Peterson '09

youth conference | noise

Youth Conference hosted more than 330 high school students from all over the Midwest. Their invasion of campus for 48 hours became a life-changing experience for them. This year's theme was about NOISE. We live in a world that is becoming increasingly noisy. How does that affect our relationship with God? This year's speaker, Nate Hulfish, a Taylor Alum and current pastor in Camden, New Jersey, looked at that noise in the first session. Then he talked about the spiritual discipline of silence in the second session. In the third session he spoke on our need for a relationship with God and each other, and he finished the last session with a challenge to make a joyful noise through caring for others and making an impact. The small groups, led by 120 Taylor students, allowed relationships to be built between the highschoolers and college students. God was in every part of the weekend, and it was amazing to see His power and movement at work.

cuts, scrapes, bruises, and class pride

This year, the Taylathon bike race proved to be as exciting as ever. In typical fashion, the season began by riders forcing themselves out of bed for 5:45 and 6:30 a.m. practices. ICC greeted the riders with music and food to help generate as much excitement and motivation as possible for that early in the morning. Despite multiple rained-out practices and a threatening weather report, the race day was sunny with clear skies, and many campus and community fans.

This year, the womens' teams entertained the crowd with many wrecks during their transitions, except the junior team, who performed almost flawlessly to earn first place. The senior women earned a second place finish, closely followed by the sophomores and the freshmen. The men's race was cleaner than previous years, without any major injuries. Despite the lack of entertaining wrecks, the seniors and freshmen created excitement by battling for the victory throughout the race. But ultimately, the seniors ended up beating the freshmen, who finished close behind. The sophomores again finished in third, with the junior men in last place.

past, present, future

The Taming of the Shrew—Seniors Erik Hatcher and Lindsay Snider led a cast of performers in presenting the opening show for a season celebrating 100 years of Taylor theatre. Audiences were delighted by the broad, physical comedy, while actors were challenged to deliver Shakespearean dialogue while communicating clearly with modern viewers. First-time cast members joined seasoned veterans in the sometimes-controversial, but always lighthearted, presentation of gender roles in society.

The Crucible—The winter show for the centennial season was a familiar favorite at Taylor. Artistic director Tracy Manning had once performed in The Crucible as a student, under the direction of Dr. Jessica Rousselow-Winquist. The classic Arthur Miller play told the story of the Salem witch trials. Student actors performed on a hauntingly beautiful set designed by technical director, and Taylor graduate, David Phillips. The students explored the value of truth as they plunged into the story of John Proctor, a farmer condemned to die an unjust death.

Smoke on the Mountain—On the heels of the emotionally draining winter play came the spring musical comedy, Smoke on the Mountain. The hilarious show turned Mitchell Theatre into 1938's Mount Pleasant Baptist Church as the audience became the congregation at a Saturday-night hymn sing. The highly interactive experience, new to Taylor, left audiences howling at the mishaps of the gospel-belting Sanders Family Singers. Physics professor Bob Davis and his wife Ellen joined a cast of nine students in the rollicking musical numbers.

John, His Story—Taylor's touring production returned as an ensemble cast performed a script based on the Gospel of John. Multiple changes to the cast kept the vignettes fresh and entertaining as they presented a message of hope to local audiences. The show ended its two-year run at Taylor with an East Coast tour and a Palm Sunday closing performance in Upland.

graduation

honoring tradition

Taylor. Graduation. I'm not sure those are two things that can be summed up easily. Thinking back on these four years, so many things stick out in my mind, but as I sat through our senior service the night before graduation, and worshipped with my graduating class, I realized what stands out most isn't Taylor at all.

Yes, Taylor is a great place, but our God who is in this place is so much greater. I think that is what I'm taking away from here. God has shaken up my world over the last four years and He has used Taylor to do so. I have experienced the depth of pain, healing, joy and love. I have seen God work in myself and in others and my childlike faith has been moved to something much deeper. While I am sad to leave this place that has been so instrumental in my relationship with Christ, I am so excited to learn how to use this growth that has been exceedingly, abundantly given to me!

art | explore beauty

I love the Taylor art department. It has challenged me in technicalities, creativity, and even in my faith. It drives me to discover God and his creative heart in new ways and has helped me learn how to worship God through my art. The best part, I believe, about the Taylor art department is that the professors encourage you to go beyond just the aesthetics of the art piece; they encourage and appreciate depth.

It is a rigorous yet beneficial program. The 4 a.m. mornings for the Drawing 1 self and/or tube drawings and the long night trying to assemble a cardboard chair to support my professors weight mark a common work load in my experience as an art major. In my opinion, however, the benefits greatly outweigh the cost. The art people are great, all different in various ways, but we can inspire and learn from one another, explore beauty together, and discover more about ourselves and God together. I love art!

There really isn't any other place like the Taylor business department. I was floored from the beginning. Classes focus on putting students in positions of leadership to build the base of Christ-like character, while managing and being a member of a team.

Taylor business professors don't even seem to be of this world. Never have I had the care, respect, and love shown to me through teaching. Our professors care less about letters on TOWER and more about developing character through showing the love of Christ and academic pursuit. SIFE is a prime example of this. SIFE's main desire is to better the community through displaying Christ-like character in all we do. SIFE gives unheard of opportunities such as the Wal-Mart trip, where a SIFE team lead by Dr. Sells traveled to the national Wal-Mart headquarters and met company executives and other employees. Through opportunities with SIFE I learned real-world knowledge that is applicable in all walks of life.

I declared my developmental economics major the second semester of my sophomore year without ever taking a course in economics. This was probably a fairly risky move, but I have enjoyed every minute of it. I've made some great friends with the people I've been in study groups with, spending hours upon hours in the library trying to learn all of Dr. Mitchell's discussion questions the night before the final. Or there's the times spent discussing different activities or conversations that took place in our microeconomics course. It has been wonderful to be able to grow close to a small group of amazing people these last few years. We've shared a lot of memories, and laughed a lot, and have learned so much. I am so grateful for the economics classes that I have been able to take because those classes are the ones that I have learned the most in.

I remember being assigned that first three-to-five page paper in introduction to Christian education ministries and honestly thinking I was never going to fill the third page. Next came "Hook Book Look Took" and wondering how I would be able to write a solid Bible study out of one, very small passage. Then, who could forget small groups, where I did not understand why I was required to spend an extra hour, outside of class, every week! Since then, I've written hundreds of pages, inductively studied who knows how many passages, struggled to halfway understand Groome's 5 Movements and spent an unimaginable amount of time with the people in my major. And even though I may not have turned every assignment in on time or gotten an adequate amount of sleep, I can't imagine doing anything else.

Being a chemistry major has been a challenging yet fulfilling experience. I have studied many, many hours at Taylor, but because our professors expect excellence, I believe I am more prepared for medical school. The standardized ACS exams we take at the end of each chemistry class always show that Taylor chemistry majors are on par with the rest of the nation. This reflects our abilities, but it also reflects the ability of our professors to teach their subject matter well. However, they do not just expect excellence, they help us achieve it. They are always willing to offer their time, outside of class, to help students understand the material. It is evident that our professors want us to succeed. Every time I sent an e-mail to a professor with questions, I receive an e-mail in return within 24 hours.

I am so thankful for my time as a chemistry major here at Taylor. I have loved learning about God's creation on a deeper level and preparing for a career in which God can be glorified through the advancement of science. It has also been a joy to stretch the mind God has given me and to allow God the chance to conquer the hurdles of difficult classes through me. I could not have chosen a better academic path during my time at Taylor.

The department of earth and environmental sciences has provided a great avenue for my personal growth, both academically and spiritually. Not only have I been challenged by the course work, but it has made me think about what I believe and revealed to me new things about God that I did not think about before coming to Taylor. I also have had the opportunity to study in the western United States on the Field Natural History of the Black Hills course. The earth and environmental science department also involves students in conservation in this area of Indiana. In the fall of 2008, I participated in the Hoosier Riverwatch, a civilian water-quality monitoring program through my geomorphology course. The environmental science department continues to strive toward an attitude of conservation and stewardship among the students and faculty at Taylor.

history | solid learning

What I really love about history is that you can study anything. Everything has a history! So even if you're not into South Asian wars or whatever, there's always something for you. My personal favorite is church history because it helps remind us of why what we do matters—all the traditions and where they come from make more sense when you see them in the context of when they were started.

But our history department in general is great because of the pros. Whether you're sitting in front of the great Dr. William Carey Ringenberg, garnering pearls of wisdom while munching on his wife's delicious baked goods, or chilling with Tracy Hoskins and eating a medieval meal with a Hapsburg dessert (I still want that recipe, by the way), you know you're in for a good time and some solid learning.

There hasn't been a lack of things to talk about this year in the political science department—life, after all, would be a little boring without a good catastrophe every now and then! Our economy has been in trouble, the United States is still in Iraq, and Barack Obama won the 2009 presidential elections (kidding, that's not a disaster).

I think that one of the great things about Taylor's political science program is its ability to challenge students to think beyond their personal world views. As we strive to see how our faith practically plays itself out in our political beliefs, we not only discover more about ourselves, but we discover the love God has for the poor, the hurting, and the disenfranchised. Life isn't black and white, and I know that my experiences in the political science department have given me that perspective.

After hearing it repeatedly from all of your professors, you finally agree: it's all about networking. You have learned to make work that is respected in the field - work that is not just excellent, but at the same time, brings people a little closer to Jesus. Your class content and your everyday conversations seem to merge; you talk about the same things outside of class as you do in class, because. Well. It's relevant. You analyze relationships and know exactly how and why people communicate in a certain way. You spend hours in the J-lab. Or is it now the Media lab? (In fact, you feel rather disoriented when you spend more than three consecutive hours elsewhere.) You see a story behind every unique individual; you value the importance of storytelling. You build Web sites, you produce films, you perform literature. You know all about inverted pyramids and press releases; rhetoric is your friend. You are a comm major.

mathematics | challenge

Coming into Taylor, I never planned to be a Math major—I consciously decided not to be one. I didn't think it would be practical enough (and I didn't want to have to put up with the "math sense of humor"). I soon realized that math is where my academic interests truly lie and that my thought processes are mathematical. I was drawn to it. Of course, the coaxing of one of the department's outstanding professors to switch majors didn't hurt either!

I didn't realize at the time how much work was involved nor in being a Math major. I learned that numbers and computation, though often assumed to be synonymous with math, are small aspects of it, and that assignments in math class aren't just rote regurgitation of the same problems done in class with a few numbers changed around. Concepts, logical thinking, effective problem solving, and even philosophical questions are what truly lie at the heart of math—which makes it useful in all kinds of situations. This is what makes math worth studying for me.

Looking back, I can't see myself studying anything else. How ironic that God led me to do exactly what I had decided not to do!

education | excellence in teaching

Throughout my time at Taylor, I have been asked the question, "What made you choose to become a teacher?" The truth is, I never really chose to declare Elementary Education as my major or considered becoming a teacher. In my mind, teaching was just a profession many women choose who really just want to get married and have children. Imagine my surprise when I showed up for Freshman Orientation and received a folder with my name on it and "Elementary Education" written under it.

I have come a long way since then. I decided to try Elementary Education as a major and discovered an exciting profession. The Taylor Education Department is full of exceptionally dedicated professors who have taught us, as well as modeled for us, excellence in teaching. I am proud to be a part of the Education Department at Taylor and thankful for the opportunity to be among such incredible people and educators.

I cannot think of better way to finish my studies as an Elementary Education major at Taylor than a journey to Washington D.C. in January. We kicked off our trip layered in winter clothes and huddled together under the Washington Monument at Obama's presidential inauguration. Of course, touring our nation's capital meant hitting the major sites- but with an altered perspective. Souvenirs became educational resources, and nightlife consisted of family dinners at T.G.I. Fridays. Some of my favorite moments, though, were shared at night; reading aloud from the FDR and Lincoln Monuments, words from the past echoed into the future. Everything from Mount Vernon to the Holocaust Museum reminded us of the power found in change and influence—something extremely relevant to prospective teachers. Traveling with Dr. Quinn and Dr. Tyner seemed only fitting. Both of these professors have meant a great deal to my class because of their commitment to our education, investment in our personal lives, and contagious desires to teach. As an Elementary Education major, I feel blessed to share so richly in relationship with my professors. I believe this trip not only inspired us professionally but also best summed up our friendships, bringing a memorable close to our senior years.

Three years in the modern language department has been a unique journey. As a pre-major freshman who had no idea what to focus my studies on, I remember finally coming to the conclusion that if I had survived four years of high school Spanish, I could only improve from that point onward. The experiences that I now nostalgically reflect from my time in the Spanish department are some that have shaped my character and my passions—from traveling abroad to attempting to remember the difference between por and para while tutoring in the language lab. Whoever said a Spanish major knew all the beginning rules of grammar had never met me. I regret not having the opportunity to be a student of all of the Spanish professors. However, I am thankful for the numerous classes that I had with Dr. Messer and Dr. Treber. The literature, culture, and language that I learned are things that I will use the rest of my life. And I am thankful for the opportunity to have worked and studied in the Spanish department during my time at Taylor.

psychology | experience

For j-term, I spent the month in Ireland completing my senior psychology capstone class. Although I knew I would miss the fun times that j-term on campus brings, I jumped at the opportunity to have my first overseas experience. While in Ireland, 12 other senior psychology majors and I worked with a non-profit, Christian AIDS organization. This organization, called ACET (Aids Care Education Training), seeks to build relationships with those living with HIV/AIDS, offering them assistance in health care and in other areas of their lives. We stayed in Greystones, where we attended classes three days a week, learning about ACET, and HIV/AIDS in Ireland and around the world and how it pertains to us and what our response should be. In the evenings and on the weekends, we were able to relax, travel, and experience the Irish culture. Later in the trip, we went on ACET client visits, where we met and spent time with people living with HIV or associated with it. For me, this was the first time I had ever come in contact with someone with AIDS. It was an eye-opening experience. I was reminded that it is so easy to stigmatize people who are different from us. God really reminded me of His love for everyone, including those with HIV/AIDS. I learned that we should not label or define people by their illnesses or struggles, but rather view them through God's eyes.

As a social work student at Taylor, I have been blessed with a small community and close friendships with both my fellow students and professors. We have had incredible opportunities to learn and travel together as a class, including traveling to Seoul, South Korea, for January 2009. We had the privilege of serving and partnering with Yum Kwang Presbyterian Church in Seoul within a day-care ministry for adults with developmental disabilities. I had the joy of working with Ji Yon, a 22-year-old with severe autism. We provided massage therapy, played games, and served these wonderful adults daily. Despite the large language barrier, we all developed a close relationships with them. I was able to see the Body of Christ spoke of in 1 Corinthians 12, which is what I strive for as both a Christian and a social worker.

Through my time in Korea and at Taylor working alongside professors and students, I have developed knowledge of people, cultures, and being a Christian in the social work profession, and I am excited to put this into practice after graduation.

Sports Management can be defined as the best of both worlds. Not only do we receive a solid foundation of business classes, like Principles of Management, Marketing, and Accounting, we also take classes geared specifically toward administration in the sports field, like Sport Public Relations and Administration of Human Performance. One of my favorite classes at Taylor was Sport Public Relations because we learned through experience. We were given the opportunity to run promotions for different Taylor sporting events, find corporate donors, do play-by-play announcing, and create media guides for individual Taylor teams. While we don't go on many of them, field trips are some of the best learning experiences. Meeting professionals at Ball State, Conesco Field House, and Victory Field, we were able to learn from those who are currently in our field, doing the things we're excited about.

Overall, the highlight of Sports Management at Taylor is the relationships I've built with my classmates. With approximately 15 upperclassmen in the major, we have spent many hours studying and taking our classes together. By senior year, I feel as if I'm hanging out with a group of close friends.

My experience in the Sports Management program has allowed me to focus my passion and love of sports in a practical way. The Sports Management degree prepared me in a variety of business settings, including marketing, human resources, public relations, economics, and business management. The program requires an internship experience to gain applicable and real-world experience as well as help with networking opportunities. My internship provided me the opportunity to work with an organization called Eagle Sports Club, where I was able to organize and manage a baseball league for kids in Detroit. I look forward to using this experience, in addition to the knowledge and preparation I have learned at my time at Taylor, to further God's Kingdom and make a difference in the sporting and business industry.

One of the best things about the Taylor Writing Center is working with so many different people and ideas. Over the course of a semester, you'll see all kinds of assignments come through and meet lots of students you may never have met otherwise. Getting to know repeat visitors is especially great, because you not only get to know their writing, you get to know them. Our weekly staff meetings are also a lot of fun—they give us a chance to catch up with each other, crack lame jokes about grammar rules, and even spend a little time learning more about writing. The cheesecake at the staff party each semester is probably one of the job's major draws—and Dr. Bird is also careful to keep us well stocked in Fruity Pebbles. It seems some of us are as enthralled by cereal as we are by sentences!

striving for excellence

Our 2008 season was remarkable and significant. The program faced a tough transition period, but this will be a year remembered for establishing stability and moving in the right direction. Wins and losses do not reflect the success Taylor Football experienced. We were blessed with great senior leadership and a great coaching staff that challenged us to compete, work hard, and grow as men. With the coaches' support, our seniors led the team on and off the field by example. Overcoming obstacles and struggles with each other has allowed us to build unbreakable relationships and experiences I would never trade for a winning season.

The seniors met with Coach Korfmacher prior to our season and discussed the season's goals. Coach Korf told us we need to display leadership by example and strive for excellence. He said excellence is a way of love and always trusts, hopes, perseveres, and protects. Reflecting on the season, we fulfilled our goals of life and character development, which is much more important than an undefeated season.

We have all devoted and sacrificed time, blood, sweat, and our bodies to this program, and for what? Taylor Football is more than a game, more than winning and losing. Taylor Football program brings us in as boys and helps us develop to leave as men; more importantly as men of God. Through good times and bad times, this program has helped our team to prepare for lives ahead as employees, husbands, sons, and friends. These experiences of growth in relationships and growth as individuals are irreplaceable. James 1:2-4, 12

for Him, we play to win

Taylor Volleyball has been a blessing in my life in many ways. The relationships I have made with my teammates will last a lifetime. We not only work well together on the court, but we have a special bond as friends.

I learned how important time management is for a student. Dedication so much time to the sport I love to play has been a blessing but also a challenge. Being a student-athlete at Taylor, I am constantly being reminded that, "student comes first in student-athlete."

Being part of the Taylor community is a major blessing in my life as well. I can speak for all my teammates when I say it has been an honor to represent Taylor's volleyball team. This season we were successful in many ways: being undefeated conference champions, achieving the 1000th win for Taylor Volleyball, and being a part of Coach Smith's 100th career win. We are amazingly blessed by our Lord and are reminded before each match that it is "for Him, we play to win."

giving the best we have

It's tough to express how grateful I am to have been able to have played soccer here at Taylor University. I thank God for the experiences and lessons it has afforded me not the least of which is the opportunity to pursue Christ through such a great sport with solid guys. One of the most important lessons I've learned is that it is imperative that we, as Christians, strive for excellence in all we do. Whether that refers to effort given in the midst of the monotony of practice or to the fervor with which we seek after the Lord — we are called to give the best we have. It has been this opportunity to experience these lessons that has proved to be invaluable.

determined till the end

It is impossible to capture the essence of the '08-'09 season with mere words on a page, but it is with a grateful heart that I attempt such a feat. Going into this season I must admit it was one of high hopes and potential promise. At its close 18 games later, this year proved to be one of utter redemption, renewal, and restoration. The respect and admiration I have for Coach Stan, Bmill, and my teammates is unmatched. Through perseverance, determination, and hard work, this tight-knit unit secured a double-digit winning record and produced one of Taylor's finest finishes ever.

As a senior I could not have asked for anything more. The love that we had for the Lord, the laughter that we shared, and the living testimony of God's grace that we carried with us as we stepped onto each field were something special. What a privilege it has been to play the game that I love with 20 other girls under the direction of a remarkable man of integrity. The future is bright for Taylor Women's Soccer, and my prayer is Philippians 1:6, that as the Lord has begun a good work within this team He will continue it until His work is finished.

running stronger

One highlight of the season is our cross-country team camp that takes place every fall before school starts. We head to Michigan and stay at a lake house where we have good training and get a chance to relax and hang out between runs. It's a great time to become close to the other guys on the team, and it helps build a strong team.

This year the team had a great season. We were a young team, with only graduating two seniors. We continued to better our overall team time throughout the year as we jumped in and out of the national rankings before falling short in the tournament. We had two runners qualify for nationals individually and run well there. Next year we're hoping to qualify the whole team. I am confident that this is possible and that if we run as we are capable of running, we should not have much problem achieving that goal. We will have a strong and experienced team with a number of upperclassmen making up our scoring top seven. We also have a strong recruiting class and are confident about our ability to go far in the tournament.

women's cross country

running for an Audience of One

Sometimes people ask me, "Why does your cross-country team call yourselves 'Maddawgs'?" Whenever I encounter this question, it is an honor to have the opportunity to brag about my cross-country sisters. To this day, I don't know the whole Maddawg story because the name was coined many years ago (so let's just say in the 80's!) What I do know about the original Maddawgs is that they were fearless, God-serving women who had way too much fun together! And, I am proud to say that this year's Maddawgs continued that tradition.

Our season started in August and ended in November, and for some the season felt even longer with year-round training. From camp until our last meet at Christian Nationals, we praised the Lord with our legs, laughter, and fellowship. Coach Cinders encouraged us throughout the season to run for an Audience of One, and I am proud to say that we did. The Maddawgs had an awesome season with five new freshman and seven returning runners. One of our very own, Alyssa Johnson, qualified for NAIA Nationals and ran her personal best. Many of us had personal records, grew as leaders, and encountered unexpected challenges. As the season came to a close, I thought back on all the wonderful memories of dancing in the locker room or praying with other teams at the finish line of races. It was obvious that God placed specific people at the finish line in need of prayer, just like He brought every girl to the Maddawgs for a reason. God was good. He strengthened our legs and hearts.

The Taylor University Men's Tennis Team had a great year this year. After losing four of last year's starters, the team was able to rebuild successfully and earn a second place conference finish in both the regular season and the conference tournament. TU had three champions in the conference tournament. Felipe Bedon continued his reign at #1 singles by beating Pederson from IWU in the final. Dave Smith won his bracket at #2 singles, and the epic duo of Jack Reed and Felipe Bedon took first place at #2 doubles. One highlight of the year for Taylor Tennis was watching Felipe win the ITA Tournament to qualify for nationals. After a third set tie-breaker loss in the semifinals last year at ITA, Felipe was ready to go and sailed through the tournament without dropping a set. Defeating IWU's #1 in the final made it even sweeter. We had a lot of fun this year playing some great tennis, growing as a team, and learning from our awesome coach, Don "What A Man" Taylor.

goals set high

With a record of 11-1, the women's tennis team had its best record in 17 years. We set our goals high in the beginning of the season by aiming to win the conference and go to nationals. While we were one match short of this goal, we concluded the season with much to be proud of. Highlights from the season include placing second in conference in both the regular season and the end of the season tournament and having three players named to the all-conference team in addition to sending freshman Germania Bedon to Alabama for the nationals of the ITA tournament. But even with so much success on the court, even better were the relationships formed on the team throughout the season. We have many fond memories and are thankful to have found so many good friends while using our gifts for God's glory.

swinging for perfection

Ten years from now, when I will look back nostalgically upon my Taylor golf career, I will consider every round, shot, putt, and duff a blessing. Every day after class, weather permitting, for the last three years, I have made my way out to Walnut Creek with my closest of friends to play a sport I love. I have been blessed to have experienced many long van rides, tiny hotel beds, and soothing hot tubs with my teammates. I have shared in the anger and frustration that only golf can provide. As a freshman, I was mentored by the juniors and seniors, and now I have the privilege to walk beside a talented and promising crew of freshmen as they begin a new chapter in their lives.

This past season was challenging for the team in many ways. Conflicting personalities, poor outings, and terrible weather all contributed to a season that was less than expected. Through these frustrations and trials, I have been able to develop a new respect for the differences within each of us and for the meaning of playing golf at Taylor. I realized I am not at Taylor to golf, but I golf while I am at Taylor.

The season was a lesson in priorities and sacrifices as the schedule was more intense than it has been in the past. It has been an enjoyable season as well as a disheartening one with all of the ups and downs that the game of golf brings. Golf at Taylor is a time that I will look back upon and be thankful for. I will always cherish my experiences on the golf course, but the prized trophy of my Taylor golf career will be the friendships that have developed over the past years.

lasting perseverance

men's basketball

The past season here at Taylor University was, needless to say, challenging. But through all the ups and downs, there was a lot of effort and perseverance displayed by my teammates as we ended the season successfully. When faced with situations in life where things do not go as planned, it is very easy to give in, succumbing to failure. However, we must press on. This lesson is true in everything we experience in our lives, not just limited to athletics. This year, the team had players who continued to persevere despite the challenging times, and now have lessons to proudly look back on. The most important thing we can do, as brothers in Christ, is to share each others burdens and continue to work together. I am proud of each individual on the team and proud to be a member myself.

immeasurably more

Our team verse this season was Ephesians 3:20–21, “Now to him who is able to do immeasurably more than all we ask or imagine, according to his power that is at work within us, to him be the glory in the church and in Christ Jesus through all generations, for ever and ever! Amen.” We came into the season as a young team with only three upperclassmen. Despite our inexperience, we believed that God would do immeasurably more than we could imagine as long as we kept our eyes on Him and played to bring Him glory. We experienced many highs, like beating ranked teams and playing in the Conference Championship, but we also experienced some low points, like going on a five-game losing streak and losing a key player to injury. But through all the adversity we faced this season, God remained faithful. He blessed our hard work with a trip to the National Tournament. Although we didn’t go as far in the tournament as we would have liked, we accomplished something great this season and had the best time doing it!

adventurous strength

What began as a season full of excitement and adventure ended as a season with new memories and friendships. This year's team began training in September. Conditioning in the fall proved it's worth when we qualified for the Distance Medley Relay with one individual qualifying for the NAIA Indoor National Championships.

Our first outdoor competition was at Rhodes College in Memphis, Tennessee. The first morning was cold and rainy but ended with sunshine by the end of the day. Rhodes College is the first of two stops on the TUTFPCBSB2K09. This year's spring break was filled with new memories, photographs, and friends. That week of preparation catapulted the men's team through the remainder of the season. Although the team fell four points short of its season goal to win a conference championship, several team members turned in top-10 performances. One person even made a new school record. Our NAIA Outdoor National Championship competitors will be participating in the 4x800 relay, 4x400 relay, high hurdles, intermediate hurdles, long jump, and steeplechase. So what did we learn from this season? We learned that lunch-meat sandwiches only go so far, there is never enough to drink on a hot day, and fun can be had with pre-wrap and water bottles. Thank you men for another great season.

accountability to improve

Our season has been athletically amazing. The team gained new members and had veterans improve by setting new records. But TUTF is much more than our athletic abilities. It's a sport where men and women are able to come together to glorify God in their athletic abilities. It's not about wins or losses but about how we challenged each other in our faith by using our athletic abilities. This journal entry written by a teammate during our spring break trip to Panama City Beach reveals what TUTF is all about: "We left for the high school where I practiced long jump and then ran a death march of 250s. A teammate was kind enough to run with me, and I was surrounded with encouragement—every single person I passed said something loving. In that hour, I was so thankful for You, God, bringing me to Panama City Beach. Much of my fears melted in seeing my team lined beside the bleachers—my family desiring my success, despite whatever the stopwatch said."

That's exactly what we are. Family. Men and women growing in their faith together, and I could not ask to be on a better team.

tremendous expectations

Over the past several years, the expectations for Taylor Baseball have grown tremendously. This season the goals for our team were even higher than usual. As a team, it was an expectation that we break the school record for wins, which stands at 33. The baseball team is formed by students who pride themselves on playing at the highest level of competition while still being able to balance their classes and faith. This is one of the best baseball teams in Taylor's history. On the field, Taylor's strengths have always been solid defense, an explosive offense, and a challenging pitching staff.

Highlights for this season include winning the Bryan Tournament by coming back from an eight-run deficit only to win by a score of 16-10, defeating the number 12 team in the nation, Berry College, two times out of a three-game series.

focused talent

It is a privilege, honor, and absolute blast to be a part of Taylor Softball. We started the season with a tournament in Arizona that created excitement for the upcoming season. We came back pumped up and ready to dominate the conference. Our regular season did not play out as well as we would have liked, but we had a lot of close games and several sweet victories. We ended the year at the conference tournament and came together to play three great games. Our bats were going, and we played nearly flawless defense. We ended on a high note, beating our rivals in a humid game under the lights.

It's hard to know what to expect going into a new season, but as I look back, I am so thankful for the one we just had. Each and every girl on the team was dedicated to the sport and to each another, and we had so much fun playing together and growing as a team. The love and joy this group has is amazing, and there is so much to look forward to with the talent on next year's team. I was encouraged by every one of these girls and was challenged by the focus, talent, and dedication I saw in my teammates. God has blessed us so much to be able to play together, and He is continuing to grow us and change TUSB into something He desires. To Him be the glory in every win, loss, hit, run, stolen base, strike, caught ball, and slide home. He made us who we are and is making TUSB what it is.

men's lacrosse

battling for the victory

This lacrosse season was filled with energy and fun. We hired the first coach in Taylor's lacrosse history – Brad Bowser – who took the team to a new level, both on and off the field. With his love for the sport as well as the players, Coach Bowser led the team to a 6-5 record. He brought lots of laughs and hard work to the program.

The lacrosse team had three seniors, each of whom played all four years: Alex Esclamado, Kyle Holloway, and Travis Camp. The team was young, but the new players picked up the game quickly and bonded well with the rest of the team. We had several games that we came from behind to win, and the team stepped up to the plate and rallied around one another to battle the other team for the victory.

As a four year member of the TU lacrosse team, I would encourage anyone and everyone who likes to have fun, meet people, play sports and yes – hit someone – to join the team next season. Colossians 3:23-24 says, "Whatever you do, work at it with all your heart, as working for the Lord, not for men, since you know that you will receive an inheritance from the Lord as a reward. It is the Lord Christ you are serving." This year's team lived that verse out and represented Christ, as well as Taylor, in every game. I love you guys and will miss playing with each of you.

With every year comes new hopes and expectations for the Taylor Women's Lacrosse team. This year we had some big shoes to fill, but they were more than filled—they were overflowing. With a strong, bold group of freshman, this team has many more years of success and will reach an undefeated season. We had several games canceled but finished 4-3. Our team is becoming stronger—not only physically, but also in numbers, in unity, and in drive. I have great hopes for this team in the future and for the wonderful things they will do. This year was amazing; I learned so much from the girls and know they have so much to offer for next year's team.

dedicated horsemanship

The Taylor University Equestrian Team has grown since last year, adding many new members. We also have grown closer as a team and as riders. Our biggest accomplishment occurred when we took a third place at our home show in the spring – right behind Purdue and Ball State universities. Taylor had two riders, junior Rebecca Helmke and freshman Hannah Bennett, qualify for Regionals. Later, Rebecca Helmke successfully moved on to Zones. I am excited to see what the team will do next year and am looking forward to being president.

bringing us together

What do we love about intramurals? The competition? Love it. The intense body paint? Love it. Obnoxious super fans? Love them. The injuries? Battle wounds are always worth it. The hours removed from studying? Definitely love that. There's something about Taylor intramurals that brings out the best (or worst) in all of us. We often end up playing sports we've never played, using balls we've never seen, and wearing colored spandex that is too bright for the untrained eye.

But despite all the ridiculousness we might bring to the court or field, we play knowing that each game brings us and the rest of campus together in a way that other events cannot. The friendly competition, the relaxing break from work, the team camaraderie, and the way wings are drawn together will stick with us as memories of our time here at Taylor. And let's be honest, who isn't a little sentimental when the last minutes of an intramural season are coming to an end?

an anthology of writing and artwork

On February 19, the 2009 edition of Parnassus was released in conjunction with the Making Literature Conference hosted by the English department. Parnassus is Taylor's art and literary journal—an anthology of some of the best art and writing from the Taylor community, including students, faculty, staff, and alumni. The journal draws its name from the mountain in Greece where, according to mythology, the nine Muses lived. This year, the journal's subtitle, "out of water," referred to the idea that sharing creativity and inspiration is a bold move that requires moving beyond the submitter's comfort zone. Sophomore Dustin Friesen designed this year's cover.

Professor Aaron Housholder was this year's faculty advisor. Kelsey Warren served as editor with assistant editors Brandon Fitzsimmons and Jenny Walton. Staff members included Lauren Birtles, Carissa Chang, Kelli Connors, Drew Demarest, Steve Etheridge, Kristina Garvelink, Marika Kosian, Ben Mattice, Cara Strickland, and Amanda Trumbower.

welcome to taylor

I wanted to join CREW because I really enjoy meeting and greeting. There's really more of an art to this than some may think. Though you do not become intimately acquainted with the people you meet in the 50-minute tour you give, you have to give them an overall good impression of yourself, of Taylor's campus, of what Taylor offers, and of the general atmosphere. Since I joined, I cannot figure out what I like best: the job itself or the people who work alongside me. There are times when we meet together in Admissions and laugh about more things than we really talk about. All the people I work with are warm-hearted, humorous, intelligent, and godly. It's been an honor and a privilege knowing them and meeting the visitors and worth some of the awkward tour moments or overnights!

I've been with the Taylor Choirs for the past four years, and it's been an eye opening experience for me. I was a student who wasn't able to study abroad for a semester, and with the Chorale and Sounds, I've been able to see the world. From the Bahamas to Greece and the Middle East, the experiences I've had and the ministries I've been able to join will stay with me forever.

Singing with the Chorale and Sounds is more than just performing, and the experience is more than going to other countries- the choirs at Taylor have an amazing and extremely effective ministry, and because it reaches across the world, its impact is beyond what I could imagine.

Alpha Pi Iota has really opened my eyes to all of the possibilities within health care and expanded my friendships with other pre-med, pre-dental, and allied health majors. Through the great variety of speakers, from orthopedic surgeons to medical technologists, we've had opportunities to explore many aspects of health care and learn more about the variety of specialties within this field. I've had a blast shadowing physicians with other students, enjoying root beer floats while listening to the experience and advice of seniors, road-tripping down to Louisville for the annual Global Missions Health Conference, and having deep, meaningful conversations about ethics within health care with close friends. I have been privileged to work alongside incredibly intelligent, gifted people, and I am excited to see where API will go in the future.

leading through serving classmates

ICC has been a fantastic experience. Planning events like Airband, the Freshmen-Sophomore Competition, and the Sophomore Mugging can be stressful and time consuming, but monthly worship nights and hymn sings completely make up for it. Getting together to sing praise to God as a group of sophomores has been a great outlet for spiritual growth for me personally as well as for others. That is what keeps me coming back for more. But Airband is super fun, too. Some of those acts - wow!

—Mark Ledgerwood '11

"Probably one of my favorite parts of being a junior on ICC is the opportunity to pour our lives into the underclassmen. It's fun getting to know them as they're transitioning into Taylor. We had the opportunity to help them lead their class."

"I love sac because it has given me the chance to get to know and to serve students from all over campus. And I have loved every minute of working with the other sac members and seeing their creativity."

rice pilaf & CPA

Being a Career Planning Assistant has been a great experience. It's actually a fun and relaxing job most of the time- if you don't include the first two months of school. For those two months the Career Development Office is swamped with fresh-faced, starry-eyed students as the entire freshman class takes the Career Direct personality test. Quick reflexes and strong nerves are a must during this time period. After this time though, the office generally slows down. The rest of the year is taken up with entering jobs into the online job database, distributing marketing for Career Development Office related events, and conducting phone calls for the annual graduate report. To sum it all up, it has been a good time, and as I always say, "Come on into the Career Development Office where we can help you plan your career!"

magnify

Christ amplified

Life at Taylor produces many thoughts, memories, and relationships that will forever be magnified in our minds. After all, many things in life are impossible to forget.

Beyond the walls of this university, though, there exists the opportunity to move forward and to experience life elsewhere. Jobs will come and go, relationships will change, and “home” might be somewhere unfamiliar. Yet the Lord remains the same forever.

We can choose to make Christ the greatest and most important part of our lives, magnifying Him, not separate from, but as part of all we do.

Through this book, we magnified the most unique and special moments of Taylor University. Our prayer is that as you flip through its pages, you will have the sense that the work of the Lord on this campus is undeniably greater than all else.
